METHODOLOGY

Pinpoint Demographics uses regression analysis to estimate the most accurate and timely current year population demographics and consumer spending.

The following steps were used in calculating the estimates in the Population Demographics database:

- 1) 1990 and 2009 zip codes data from the U.S. Census were matched. Where zip codes were not able to be matched, data from neighboring zip codes were considered in adjusting data.
- 2) Regression analysis was used on 1990 and 2000 data to calculate the estimates for the current year.
- 3) Where the percent change of data from 2000 to current year were too low or too high from an acceptable range, data from neighboring zip codes were considered in adjusting data.
- 4) Population Density categories and Population Segments categories were added according to the definitions in the U.S. Population Demographics database.

The following steps were used in calculating the estimates in the Consumer Spending database:

- 1) The Consumer Spending database were calculated based on the U.S. Census' "Consumer Expenditure Survey" and Pinpoint Demographics' U.S. Population Demographics database.
- 2) Consumer Spending categories are based on the family income categories, such as $25,000 to $49,999 income each year.

Consumer Spending Database Categories

The Consumer Spending Database has a hierarchy ranking of categories, include the Main category and three sub-categories, notated 1), 2) and 3). The following example describes the hierarchy:

- Main Category: Food
 - Sub-category 1): Food-at-home
 - Sub-category 2): Cereals and bakery products
 - Sub-category 3): Cereals and cereal products
 - Sub-category 3): Bakery products

Sub-categories 3) will add up to sub-category 2). Sub-categories 2) will add up to sub-category 1), etc.
